

Zaire Blackwell is a graduate of Delaware State University with a B.S. in Biological Sciences (Health Professions concentration) and currently a Master of Public Health student at the University of Delaware. He is the founder of The Pre-Health Plug, a platform dedicated to supporting pre-health students through mentorship, resources, and community engagement. Within CAST, he serves as both the Pre-Health Coordinator and Student Engager, leading efforts to expand student support, programming, and engagement across disciplines. With aspirations to become a physician, he seeks to integrate clinical care and public health to address health disparities and inspire the next generation of healthcare leaders
