

Tips to Grow Blueberry in Delaware

known for many health benefits and for natural dyes, blueberries are native to the Americas. The US produces 90% of this crop for the world.

- Choose a sunny spot. Though blueberries grow in semi-shade in nature, heavier fruiting happens with more sunshine.
- Test for pH, and adjust to a very acidic 4-to-5 range using pelleted sulfur (a natural element, and easier and safer to use than dusty powders).
- Though blueberries like infertile soil (yes!), it must be high in organic matter.
- Add peat moss to the hole when planting.

Delaware State University
Cooperative Extension

Contact:
Dr. Lekha Nath Paudel
Farm Management Specialist
Lnpaudel@desu.edu